MEESHO'S ORGANIC GROWTH STRATEGY

22-DAY CONTENT CALENDAR & PERSONA DEVELOPMENT

Presented by: Anjali Rajput FYBBA 163
Professor: Divyank Jain

Why Meesho?

The Core Focus: Tailored for "Middle India" (Bharat) shoppers in Tier 2 & 3

Organic Pillar Strategy: Focus on price transparency, local relatability, and community trust over high end lifestyle aesthetics

Customers insight: The Trust Deficit. Real users are deeply afraid of "Wrong Product Delivered." They read comments, check user-uploaded review photos, and look for the "Meesho Mall" verified badge before buying.

Buyer's personas

Priya Mehta (34, married with 2 kids)

Backbone of Meesho's volume.
She shops for the home and family, not for herself

Reflection note:

The most surprising thing for me about this project was discovering that there is a completely different approach to doing marketing for a brand such as Meesho through organic marketing channels compared to the conventional approach of lifestyle marketing. However, through my study of Meesho's actual demographics, I have learned that it is really about transparency, cultural humor, and pure value that drive engagement at Tiers-2 and -3 in India. With more time to work on this project again, I would definitely explore the regional language approach further.

Use of AI vs My own imagination

I used AI to help me brainstorm data frameworks, structure 22 days spreadsheet and some visuals for content idea. However, the Core identity of the personas, the localised humor in captions and the choice of using YouTube as secondary platform over others came entirely from my own world. Doing the research part by going to the plasterer reviews, in app complaints and digging their social media presence was whole my work.

Thank you!
